AtariGrip has signed something that has absolutely nothing to do with Brian Hughes. Lane first of scandalous foxy managers. Yep, it's signed in the name of Lane.

AtariGrip is the incredibly subtle, subtle machine reported about in your issue. You're welcome some months ago. Survival for the fall that you are a Day-Independent who must literally squash the population of bugs that have taken over a quiet family-like neighborhood (a neighborhood much like your very own).

Expect it to appear on your AtariGrip of someone in the future (probably).

1. What's the small, furry, cute and goes wild if run over by a juggernaut? Wrong, it's a rat. It's a rat.

2. IMPOSSIBLE! - the game that puts you on your head, and jumps on your head.

When the going gets tough, the tough get hairy. In the end, the best is the little mole.

You may have noticed that we had a lot of spam frenzy last issue, well to turn up a little we (on the country's only full-declared mag) are offering a tin of spam to the lucky reader who can tell us what "spam" stands for.

YOUR RECIPE FOR SUCCESSFUL COOKING

Guess what I've read. Don't know? I've got my hands on a copy of the film script for RoboCop II written by comic booker Frank Miller, and I can exclusively reveal that the Mexican game (currently being programmed) is going to be one violent mother, mainly because the film features even MORE violence/action than the first.

It features not one but two Robocops, and the second one (ie, MCI slaphy), has to be seen to be believed. There are some wicked flight sequences that DeLeon'll be lapping up.

POST APOCALYPSE

Lock up your gerbils, hide your hamsters, the postman with the masochist is here and his gun needs some serious victims. If masochist is your name and big fleshy lumps your game, then read on, read on...

SHORT BUT ABUSIVE

Oh you, not features, I was very angry that you didn't put Hardcore in the March issue. I thought the article on Graphic Sex was brilliant. Sylvette Hesson, Wimbledon PA: Who are you called not features? I hope the extra-extended 12 inch remix last issue more than compensated (I've swallowed a flaming dictionary). Even better stuff is coming up though, read the rest of this ish to find out what.

DATEL DREAMS

Glad to see the magazine's getting better, loads of reviews and all that, plenty of tips. Duff! No adventure section, there's a lot of us out here waiting for a good adventure section for reviews, tips, help, etc.

Having got all that off my chest, I bought an Action Replay Mk 'n' Cartridge from Datel Electronics via an advertisement in YC. I had it about a week and one morning when I inserted the cartridge the computer hung up with no keyboard control. I phoned Datel's technical department and they suggested that I should clean the motherboard on my C64.

After doing this the cartridge has worked perfectly ever since. I would recommend the Action Replay 'n' to anyone, especially those like me who are a bit dubious of mail order. Datel is good to its word and I can't imagine how I managed without the Mk 'n' as it adds another dimension to the C64.

Even games with no pause facility can be paused using the screen edit function. Could you please give my thanks to the gentlemen at Datel who answered my query for their excellent service. It's nice to say something good about a firm instead of complaining about shoddy goods, bad service, etc. Thank you, Lee Mandle, Huddersfield

PA: It's good to see somebody other than the YC lads that appreciates a good service when they see one. The Datel guys work hard, and they deserve any praise which is aimed in their direction.

We do have an adventure column, it's not quite as regular as you might wish for though.

NO WORRIES

I recently bought my first issue of YC (the March edition), due to the fact that my favourite ever mag, CU, has now become totally Arriaga. The only problem I have with your mag is that it doesn't have enough colour. I also have these questions: 1. Will you ever cover the Arriaga (I certainly hope not?

 2. Who the hell does Rick Henderson think he is?
 3. Are you going to have a comic strip?
 4. Are you on drugs?
 Paul Mullen, Northampton

PA: 1. Nope, nerves, not on your rally, would we be to you quiff? 2. The Archbishop of Stratford-Upon-Avon not 3. Several more. One of which is already around! 4. Nope, but I'm rather partial to Jelly Tots!

GASP!!!

Yo Pooty!

What an ultra cool mag you've got. I goes down to my local newsagents and I see a strange looking magazine with a tape on the front. 'Elo...'. What is this? So I decides to buy it and... well, I get completely blown away by the whole shabang. Not only is it solely 64, but it also has all the main features of other leading magazines.

After reading every possible word in YC the far I think is, hold it! This has a lot of potential, I give YC 3 months to become one of the best magazines available. As I can say it, CJ, Joop and C+VG, watch it, there's a new mag in town, it's called Radio YC.

Anyway, after all this heavy gawling, I ask you one message favour, and that is for my letter to be pinned so that my name will be immortalised into the pages of the magazine of the future.

Mark Smith, Rabat, South Africa

PS: I hope you can acknowledge my suggestion:

- 1) More colour (or colour on the major reviews and features)
- 2) Adventure helpline like other mags.
- 3) Larger Hushhah and Neon Zone.
- 4) Copies for us overseas readers (I get your magazines one month late).
- 5) High quality games on tape.
- And 6) Not to introduce Amiga games or anything else, because there is far too much coverage for that overgrown microchip.
- And, 7) Up-to-date disks so we can see 'what's where'!

PPS. YC rules, definitely!
 PPS. Give yourselves a slap on the back and give me more stuff for my money.
 RRR5 Boy, have you guys made my day or what?

PA: Mark, consider your message favour to be granted, gawling gets you everywhere.

GIBBER, GIBBER, BLAAAH!

For a number of years I have been buying YC 64 and when it was available in the bookshops.

During this period your magazine improved so much that last October, with the introduction of joints on the 48 computer, I would have put YC at the top of the computer magazine sales list. With these thoughts in mind I decided to take out a regular subscription and consequently sent off my cheque for twelve months' subs.

After two telephone calls to your distribution office, at my expense, I finally received the 1st edition a few days ago.

At this point words fail me; I can only assume that the editor of YC has gone completely raving mad or maybe he is suffering from some kind of senile decay, because the devil contained within the covers of YC cannot be the product of the same mind that turned out such brilliant stuff two months ago!

Please do not, repeat not, send any more editions to my address. Regards the balance of my subscription, you can use it to obtain medical help for the editor.

W. Dune, Worlington

PA: Consider it done, Bill's been in need of some serious help for years. Once his brain is straight though, I think you'd better watch that he doesn't tell you where to stick your money.

On our highly abusive note I reckon I'd better sign off (I may be hard, but Bill is softer) and I'll leave you with this joke. What do you call a rabbit that tries to cross the M25 with a hot and sexy on? Dead!

ATTACK OF THE CUTIES

System 3 wishes to celebrate the launch of its first solo release by offering, through this wonderful organ, the chance to win copies of the excellent game (as seen in the demo on our tape) Flimbo's Quest. Also, because it is a truly winning piece of software. You have a chance of Vendetta creeping its way into your pockets too.

10 copies of both games must be won, so the first ten correct entries (who get the questions right below) drawn out of the hat on June 30th (the closing date) will win a copy of BOTH games (on tape).

1) What is the name of the curly wutsey dude which appears alongside Andy Crane on Children's BBC?

2) What is the name of Philip Schofield's Gopher?

3) What is the name of the hero in Flimbo's Quest?

A BUTTER- -FUL GAME

In the first of his regular reports from countries afar, Paul Rigby speaks to Karl Butler, programmer of Sentinel Worlds 1.

Mayday, Mayday. Caldecote do you receive? This is the transport barge "New Moon" out of Norjamm town. We have been attacked (...) like nothing we've ever seen (...) out of nowhere (...) losing fuel, hurry Caldecote we're string ducks out here. Mayday, Mayday (...). Oh No — Oh my God. They're coming back." (end of transmission). Karl Butler has a fascination for space. His first commercial release, EOS (Earth Orbit System) was never seen over here, although it was released for the C64. The game followed NASA's plans for the next 50 years of space exploration. His inspiration for EOS, and ultimately Sentinel Worlds, was the film 2001: A Space Odyssey. Now I don't know about you, but this film floxed me sideways. Karl understood it. (I'll have to ask to tell me what it's about, sometime) and it became, along with movies like the Star Wars Trilogy, the catalyst for a career in games programming. As Karl says himself:

"It's something that I'm coming to specialise in. Being involved in one topic you become expert in it. Naturally you become involved in the next project in the same area as it's easier to make that jump."

The actual idea for Sentinel Worlds (from which the leading paragraph comes from), came from a book Karl was writing at the time. The plot was rejected for the design of a table-top RPG. So after EOS was finished it proved tempting for Karl to utilise the story for the basis of Sentinel Worlds. The plot was highly modified, mind you, as many additions and changes were made while basic ideas such as place names and characters were kept.

The origin of Sentinel Worlds was to follow the concept of the re-discovery of magic.

This merging of the D&D (and the science fiction world is an intriguing concept but scattered with many pitfalls that Karl has largely managed to avoid with great optimism. When Sentinel Worlds appeared there were scattered comments about the underlying similarity between it and Economic Art's Starlight.

"I think there's some natural similarities. But it's almost like comparing two Dungeons and Dragons-type games. There's obviously going to be similarities in character development, what they can do, etc. With regard to combat, I took a different approach as I went for real-time action, a faster dog-fight type of mode rather than a slow strategic approach that Starlight took. Other similarities may have come from the fact that the producer of both products was the same – Joe Yovan. Although he doesn't get a whole lot of credit he is the bounceboard for ideas. So it's likely that the same philosophies will appear. There is no conscious effort to copy anybody, though.

There have always been fantasy role-playing games. They're everywhere! From the Sorcerer, Europe and the UK. Single character, party-based, they come in big boxes, small boxes, coffee-concept that, without technology, the story does not exist. I think we're talking heavy SF book-type plots here. If that is the case, great! We could do with some originality in the RPG scene. Karl wants to increase the involvement of characters in his future work. The use of interaction, for example. This would be to the detriment of combat of course – well something's got to go. However some combat will stay. As Karl says "it's got to be a game". There must through direct text. Some low character would produce a shorter conversation. Part of the fun may be that the representation isn't there notes, deep. It's possible people got what they wanted out of the conversation well with an so Chusima didn't play a part.

Another nagging notion, I had with some of the output sequences, journeying in the ATs, for example. I thought that some of the sequences a little bit long and tedious. A similar drawback appeared when you were on a planet and you had to lead your team through corridors, and so on. I found it time consuming, manoeuvring each character around obstacles.

At the time I thought it was somewhat impractical. I was looking at a system a designer instead of a player's point of view. That everything had to be in scale. Planes have to be huge, update in size. I was thinking that a TAD was a realistic simulation of the world. My new game will have smaller planes. Challenges will be more intellectual, they won't be overrated. In fact my philosophy has changed a bit, a bit since Sentinel Worlds.

Right, after that session, I did think that the interaction was well done. How was it developed?

I was not overly impressed by the technology system seen in many games. I wanted to have much more of a representation system. When you look at that you realise that a conversation is just a set of possible questions and another set of possible answers. Once you pass through one answer, that answer's going to lead to another set of questions. Forming a natural tree system, giving a set of paths which lead to another set of paths.

One of the most enjoyable aspects of the interaction system is the atmosphere. Development of characters is a more important and often overlooked feature of RPGs. Sentinel Worlds makes an effort to inject some much needed atmosphere. This atmosphere is even more apparent in a scenario which is, by default, so vast. Karl said that his new game will have an advanced conversation tree. In fact, he described it more as a network where you can go down a conversation path, come straight back up again and so on as you issues... So was there a need for a SF RPG to try to resurrect some form of balance? Maybe offer some form of choice?

"Computers and science-fiction go hand in hand. You find the same kind of growth. I think there was a need – there was a need, I think. I think that the new product I'll address more of the RPGs of true science-fiction-type games. Has anybody really addressed the true science-fiction audience? People who read Starman and those kind of books. There has been a lot of effort to create games which star an evil antagonist. But in the true science-fiction sense there isn't always that evil antagonist. Sometimes there is a concept of good which involves the use of technology. The plot of an industry or a true science-fiction is largely an unexplored market."

By technology, I mean that the story involves it to a high degree. Not just introducing technology by using objects but the

be an element of action to spur the adventure. However, too many RPGs rely on combat to see the player through the plot. This form of game is generally the product of a barren imagination. I've played too many RPGs of this nature and, generally, they bore me stiff. Yes, even killing gets boring after a while. Another head buster of Yovan. Is this the genre that Karl wishes to distance himself from.

Returning to Sentinel Worlds, for a sec. I was most impressed with the game. However, no game is perfect, so now was the time to get all of those pent-up notions of my mind. Who better to discuss them with than the author. One of the main attributes in Sentinel Worlds, in Chusima. My query was "does it do anything?" – it didn't seem to matter if the attribute was high or low, a bug or an unused attribute, the same or what?

Very subtle. It extends the logical capabilities that you may have with each individual. It's something which is hard to analyse don't have to follow a set structure.

Procy is a big problem, as I'm sure you know. Many companies have a variety of "solutions" to the dilemma. Karl, instead of introducing a codewheel system favoured by many other Electronic Arts programs, decided to have a paragraph book (also seen in Wasteland, for example). The theory being that the game would prompt you, at certain times, to read a section of the book as provided. As well, Karl has given certain amount of freedom to the game: it chooses the points of opportunity.

"I like a lot of freedom, but I don't like to be told what to do or how to do it," says Karl. "So I thought, right? I can't develop, or write, or act, and get involved with the story. So the paragraph scheme also provides a benefit to the player. I think it's a lot more interesting than a codewheel and so on.

"I also like the graphics in Sentinel Worlds. These were done by a freelance artist called Mike Kozak whose past work includes Secret of the Tomb. What control does an author have over the graphics? As Karl created the game world he must have a good idea of what his characters should look like. So what sort of communication took place descriptions."

As far as the music is concerned? Well, our Karl is a down Paul Collins. (In all of who on the tracks. Dave produced whatever track which worked well with the technology.

"The technology required a certain amount of timing using instruments that had very long or short lengths. So you get the effect of more than one instrument playing at the same time. What a great problem to, though, I think. In which you have a melody and then you add another drum beat. It would well be an interest in music. So, in the future, I'll be doing something of the kind, but not the new product."

Looking both far and near, I asked Karl of the time of writing, he wished he had included certain features that never made it into the game, or at least features that were included.

"I wish I'd spent more time with the magic system. That should have been a lot more developed. I wish I'd spent more time with the ending of the game. The magic combat part of it could have been more evolved. It all works well but I'm just a perfectionist in that respect."

Right. Karl's been referring to it

Worlds 2. It's a second fiction game. It will have the same sort of system as Sentinel Worlds but a much more pure version of science fiction. Incorporating many other philosophies I've learned in the last year. Whether or not we'll continue the actual storyline of Sentinel Worlds, I has to be explored and is still under consideration. Although the new game is a stand-alone product, Sentinel Worlds is has played Sentinel Worlds. I will recognise the game. The story will be a lot more science fiction and might have some.

So what's it all about (Karl)?
It's a story about Sentinel Worlds and an extended science and technology of thinking about it. And I want to tell you much more of what the game has when it without giving too much away. There's much more of a conscious effort or creating a storyline without an evil antagonist. Actually, there is one and people will find it menacing. But the resolution of the problem is not handled through using, rather through technology and science.

There is, however, a secondary storyline with a traditional and antagonist. There was going to be diems in the game, who will have their own personalities and culture. There is a big number of smaller plots to give background information from the major plot. These issues are not the "collect ten pieces of a sick" type problems. There are more involved in what the character does as an occupation. The main mission can be solved without any reference to these sub-missions. The overall game is by no means linear. You can take any number of directions. The game is not really any bigger than Sentinel Worlds. It relies more on quality rather than quantity."

Ah, quality. A word not often used in the software industry. Sentinel Worlds, while by no means perfect, has got a high level of quality to it as well as addictiveness that draws you back again and again. Karl's new project is an exciting prospect. The pure science-fiction he proposes is very intriguing, especially if you combine this with a high degree of character development. If all of a well, we should see a highly original, in-depth game. One thing for sure though, it'll have a fairly background beat to it.

▲ I don't like the look of his face. I'm gonna smash him up with a baseball bat. Oh, it's a mirror between author and artist?

"I created a description of each plotline, what I wanted to show, what kind of person is he/she and so on. He was working mostly on his own though, working from those throughout the interview, dropping a fax here and there—what about this new game, then? Is it a Sentinel Worlds sequel or a totally new product.

Originally, it was Sentinel

WORLD CHAMPIONSHIP BOXING MANAGER

Supplier: Goliath Games

Price: £9.99 (Cass) £14.99 (Disk)

You've been a football manager, a hockey coach, a jazz big band leader, a disco DJ, a record agent, the winner of a few annual golf better ball contests and now a boxing manager. You have the glorious task of choosing an up and coming boxer and turning him into a star. This may happen later in life – after all, Mike was beaten by an unknown – but even if it doesn't, you can make it happen on your list.

To start with you have to sign him. Then you are faced with as many a slew of hopeful youngsters that any real manager that even had to think about. They will want to negotiate their contract on the spot (though if new hopefuls you can probably take advantage of them at first). The contract (unless of a minimum wage) (salary, minimum number of bouts and average percentage of purse for the following year). The contract is renewed each year and as a fighter gains experience the negotiations will become more and more fierce.

Once you've got your man of many men you can start fulfilling the owner's by signing up some bouts. Grab the phone and a lot of other managers will be deployed. Each one has five fighters in his camp of various passages in the world. You can arrange a fight between one of his fighters and one of yours but if the fight is mismatched he won't agree to it. Once a proposed fight has been agreed on, then a deal over the purse has to be bargained for if you're too greedy then he'll tell you what other times around he hangs up refusing to speak to you again.

Assuming all goes well around the negotiation table you can start making schedules for your boxer. To get there is the peak of their physical condition every day will need to be carefully planned. The training methods are punching, sparring, bag work, road work and weight training. These all affect a different aspect of your boxer's abilities. A quick trip to the physio will give you a good report of your fighter's strengths and weaknesses.

Day by day the running of the business is all down to you. If the phone rings no one else is going to answer it. You won't open itself either. There are two levels of control for the boxing world who have to confirm the legality of each bout by post. As well as the physio and manager there are agents who you can assign to spy on potential opponents.

Goliath sensibly opted to use computers instead of a graphical fight sequence and it would very nicely indeed. Between rounds your boxer's physio is displayed spouting dry facts and bruises he may have picked up. This puts the responsibility for patching him up using your ointment, water, band-aids, springs and cold sort. The commentators give a rough estimate of what up he's doing but if the bout goes the disbeliever expect to hear a few howls while waiting for the verdict.

Very competitive, dangerously addictive, refreshingly different and nicely presented.

If you like management games and don't like the added hassle of handling finances (there's none of that here), then it's an absolute must. Send a copy to Tyson. He might learn a thing or two. ACC

FLIMBO

And in this age of violence, only two, violence, and sex, what juicy morsel has System 3 thrown into the proverbial bowl of fruit? A game to cure that the bottom of your stomach will touch the roof of your mouth in an effort to empty its contents.

What is this game about? Well, sit back dear reader and get a bucket handy, you may well need it.

Flimbo had a gorgeous girl who cared for his every whim, and they skipped and danced merrily among the butterflies and tulips, singing and frolicking in the sunlight. Unfortunately, there was one who did not enjoy prancing his dainty toes around meadows, for he was mean and, most unpleasantly, dying. And being such a grouch this fellow did kidnap poor Flimbie and lock her in his laboratory.

The reason behind this cowardly deed was that the evil one was wasting away and he needed the life juice gift of a nubile female to restore himself. Flimbo, however, had other plans for his girlfriend (probably involving foam animals and rubber tubing), so he has vowed to win her back, no matter what the odds.

Fight your luck? My word, are you hard. I bet you've been fired on a diet of Guppy, Dungle and Dogwood. Anyway, in Flimbo you must save your sweetheart using all your powers, even though your head seems to be malformed, and this is not going to be easy, especially because your head seems to be malformed.

Now after the beat-em-up boom, the shooty craze, and the diving game frenzy, the latest addition (apart from the obvious "World Cup" reversioned money grabbers) is the cute game. And why not? The success of games like Double Double Rainbow Islands, and Super Wonderboy cannot be overlooked, and seeing as these are all coin-op conversions, they have been far longer in development than we can imagine. Flimbie's Quest, on the other hand, is totally and fully original, and brings a new cutesy wunsy character into the fray.

There are five levels to go through, each one being a different area of the land which you must progress through. On each level there is a shop, where you can buy things, and, most importantly, deposit is provided that allows you entry into the next deep, and the next level. This word though has been broken up into individual letters, and they are scattered around in the shape of mutants.

Luckily you have an ability to know what mutant holds each letter, so you must search the level that you're on and find the mutant, kill it and a scroll will appear. Collect the scroll and deposit it back at the shop for a letter.

There are also other objects scattered around in the shape of mutants, and once that you will find such things as money bags, invincibility, and extra lives. The money bags can buy you extensions to your firepower, etc. much in the mould of many of the games.

There are also extra rooms where tonnes of cash can be won, if you collect it in the right order. It is very Japanese in style and in this case it is good to see that Europe can match the best of them.

Although Flimbo's is a platform and ladder style of game, it has certainly brought this ancient medium right up to date. The gaps in the walls have parallax scrolling, and the monsters are sometimes made up of much more than one spine (the slow lumbering Woodhouse kind of creature, for instance).

The graphics are nothing short of excellent, and being of the cute variety, are bright even when the backgrounds may be very evil indeed. Flimbo himself is set to become a cult hero (like Dizzy, Manic Miner, and Rastapop) and System 3's first solo release (without the intervention of Activision) not only deserves, but is set to become a classic.

Maybe when the sequel arrives and everybody has Flimbo's posters on their walls you'll get my drift it's just a shame that he's so scarily, paroxysmally cute!

RAINBOW ISLANDS

Supplier: Ocean

Price: £9.99 (Cass) £14.99 (Disk)

Bub and Bob are back! Yes, Bubble Bobble fans, dust off your joysticks and prepare for more marathon gaming sessions! The good news is that the game is just as great, just as addictive and just as fun as it's predecessor. The bad news is that Bub and Bob, intrepid bubblebers of the penitentiary world, have been changed from dinky dinosaurs to chubby cherubs. The scenario is then to say the least, it looks as if the programming was the priority because there is no real reason for the famous duo to be there other than to face the fresh challenge. Sounds good to me...

In case you missed out on the original Bubble Bobble game, Bub and Bob had to take on myriads of evil monsters and eat as much food as possible. It was a game of real high scoring action. Rainbow Islands remains the same atmosphere of frantic action and pain grabbing tactics. Bub and Bob had to work their way to the top of each island. There are seven islands in all and each has a different theme, insects or monsters or whatever. The game loads level by level but this doesn't take very long and you'll hardly notice the pause.

The islands are made up of platforms. The idea is to reach the guardian of the island at the top of every fourth screen.

Whatever hero you use you'll find that they are extremely easy to control. They can run around and jump as usual, but their weapons have been changed into rainbows. These take some getting used to. Rainbows can be run along and jumped off to reach higher platforms. They can stick on top of one another to form ladders. Creating a rainbow along the ground sometimes reveals extra fruits to collect.

Monsters are knocked out by being hit with a rainbow. These then form fruit, jewels or powers. Falling on top of rainbows breaks them and sends them tumbling down the screen. The shower of rainbows kills only monsters or collects any unrequited food for you. Finally, rainbows can be cast as food or objects to collect them. There are seven different jewels to collect. Only one or more of each and you will be awarded a bonus life.

There is a set time limit on each screen. Hanging around for too long and the 'Hurry up!' message appears. Then water starts rising up the screen and the monsters turn an angry red and move faster. At this point, die in contact with a monster and they can't swim either. Reaching the top of the screen is awarded with a huge chest of goodies that falls down to spray its contents all over the place. These can be collected for bonus points.

The powers are very useful indeed. Shoes speed up your movement considerably. Yellow potion picks speed up the eating of rainbows and red ones add to the number of rainbows cast at once (up to three).

▲ Looks like he's got a case of outflow

▲ Up above the trees and houses...

There are also super powers that pop up from time to time. These might grant huge bags of cash for big bonus points or a really deadly power to destroy large amounts of monsters. Don't explode when collected and the shogun kills any monsters it touches.

Fruit and veg lines each screen. Collecting gigantic amounts of it is the way to massive scores, and these can be found by careful use of rainbows. The game is a frantic race for points in the two player mode. Gameplay wise Rainbow Island is dangerously addictive. Once you get the hang of the subtleties of rainbow use you'll be absolutely hooked. The island's guardians are suitably tough and it's a worthy challenge to Sub and Bob's rainbow eating skills.

The game has been beautifully designed and programmed. Every character, from the monsters to the fruit is superbly drawn and brilliantly coloured. The whole game bears an uncanny resemblance to an explosion in a jelly-rot factory. The screen scrolls upwards very smoothly and there are no flickers, no glitches, nothing. It's very hard to fault a game which is so great all round. My advice is to buy it once you've finished reading this. Then get it home, load it up and prepare to play for hours and hours. Oh, the sound is good too. If you only ever buy one game for your 64 make it Rainbow Island.

Pipe Mania!!

Supplier: Empire
Price: SEE OUR OFFER

If someone gives you a piece of piping you have three choices. You can get out and mug someone, become a plumber, or play Pipe Mania. I would recommend the latter, as mugging is criminal and although being a plumber may be lucrative it is unlikely to be as much fun as Pipe Mania.

The water has started its journey and in a mad dash against the flow you must lay pipes which give you points and keep the water moving. Placing any connecting pipes on the grid would be all too easy as the program selects the pipes and you place them. Forthcoming pipes are shown in a vertical list, the next pipe to be placed at the top of the column. When placing pipes you must ensure that you do not lead yourself into a dead end. If the pipe you require is not within the list you must place ahead and place the piece elsewhere or place the next pipe over the top of the current one. Doing this shows a small explosion and a small loss of score is incurred. The problem with placing pipes in pipes is you need to guess that or select part of the previously placed pieces which have been placed on the grid are deducted from your score.

There are several ways to gain bonus points. The easiest (and only option available on lower levels) is to place a cross pipe and lead the water flow back through the pipe at a ninety degree angle. On later levels, sections of pipe are placed on the grid by the computer, running the flow through these sections gains points as blocks using the reservoirs which also slow the water flow when filling. The higher the level the faster the flow and the more money the action. You do receive a limited amount of time before the flow starts but this also changes as you reach higher levels. On higher levels you also find obstructions such as fish or damaged sections of the grid, both obstacles making that section of the grid unusable. Other unusual features include ending points for the flow and holes in the grid walls (leading the flow into one of these causes it to enter the screen via a similar hole on the other side of the grid).

When two players are participating each seeks the advantage while ensuring that the flow continues (if it stops both players lose). The winner in the two player game is the one with the most full pipes when the flow stops. A useful tactic is to divert the flow away from your fellow player's pipes and with any luck they won't notice until it is too late.

A fun game with some nice touches and the two player mode is likely to lead to many a pole in the ribs. A worthy offering, one that aims and does please. AP

FUN ★ 1

The tension mounts. Three jelly rats dived between you and the World Championship. The first red jelly rat lights up. Flare up the engine. The second red jelly rat and it's time to check the gear. The green jelly rat and you're away! Scream and scream of tires as you leave half of them behind you on the grid.

No, I'm not describing the rush to the newsgen in when the new YC comes out. I'm describing the latest arcade conversion from Activision. The game has little resemblance to a packer of jelly rats, other than the fact the graphics are brightly coloured. Don't let this primary fault in the game put you off though, because it's otherwise a great little wheelie.

For starters the game can be played by up to four players. This brings the spirit of competition somewhat to the fore! To fully utilise the four player option you're going to have to invest in a joystick, splitter lead, and of course find three other maniac drivers with no sense of sportsmanship. The idea is very similar to the Super Sprint arcade game. You have to beat the opposition over the finish line any which way you can. This needs to be done as quickly as possible, because you not only have a limited amount of time but you also have a spare fuel supply as well.

The screen scrolls smoothly around the lead car. This means that anyone is a significant distance behind it is going to go off screen. This is bad news for the person at the back because they lose fuel and get bumped at the front again. Which is bad news for the leader in turn because the back marker has a reasonable chance of becoming the leader. In each race there is a ghost car. This is always a dangerous option because the ghosts generally consist of miscreants or go-karts. Get hit by a car or main and you lose more fuel.

The cars that manage to finish the course get awarded with cash. This can be spent later on in the spare shop to soup up the Hot Rods. Spares available include improved tires, engines and bodywork. This is handy means that you have a better chance of winning the next race and so on. As well as winning cash, extra cash can be picked up on the track and using fuel for your tank as well. Any fuel you have left at the end of a race gets carried over to your total in the next.

Activision has done a good job on Hot Rod. From the graphics to the sound it's all top class. Not specifically original or particularly glowing, but the four player option makes for potential family feuds and the gameplay is gripping enough to keep you at it for days (and). Car racing games grab it now, then leave up for the joystick spring. Worth (at least) a weight in jelly rats. ADC

It's 2019. You're a top-fighter pilot who has just been read off because of old age, 'till he said that he begins at forty?

Angry, the drones are big, but as we know it will never be the same again. This is because of a jolly nasty bunch of aliens who are living under the Pacific Ocean. They're not content to wait for the greenhouse effect to drown the entire Human Race. Oh no, they're going to speed up the process by making the sea rise from below.

Now this is good news for drought-stricken third world countries but bad news for everyone else. That's why they've contacted you. After all, being down on your luck, broke and unemployed you're the ideal candidate. As well as being a damn fine pilot

So the lure of hundreds of megabucks has convinced you (beyond the pose of claiming to have saved the world) that you should do the job.

The very nice then at the UN being kindly lent you 15,000 credits to buy equipment with. There is a great build-your-own-underworld death machine ship to spend it on. This appears at the beginning of each level (and the points which you have accumulated can be spent on credits. There are four different ships. These cost between three and seven thousand credits, and differ in design and the amount of extra bits you can add to them.

These extra bits are very useful (and quite interesting). There are three types of cannon, and three variations of each; four types of missile; four special powers; unintelligent drones; and eight types of modules. The drones are like bulldozers, flying in straight lines and blowing away. The modules fly in set patterns, like circles and lines and destroy anything that hits them. The powers are smart bombs, flamethrowers, lightning bolts and dove arms.

All of these extra features add greatly to the game's appeal and lasting interest. There is plenty of action in the game proper, with loads of flying and exotic hazards (including time loss of daylight). There are very large ships that blast big bolts of energy at you. Missile launchers lob vast amounts of fire at your spaceship(s). At the middle and end of each level there's a power above all others. These gladiators will do their utmost to stop the deadly flow from your guns.

The game is technically superb, with terrific sound and great graphics. Although they are quite dull-looking, and the missiles are jerky, the scrolling of the screens and the general movement is very nice. Although I tend to avoid comparisons with Amiga versions, this is very true to its elder brother and sports almost identical playability.

Shut em up fans will love this game. It's the first ever blaster on the 64 and very good value for money. Amazingly addictive and extremely playable. Get it, seal you off into your bedroom, draw the curtains and blast off. A++

CLOUD

Supplier: Logoman

Price: £9.99 (Cass) £14.99 (Disk)

There is the current trend of cute games comes Logoman's Cloud Kingdoms. As well as being similar to several games from the past, it is also extremely addictive and highly playable. You take control of the world's first injection-moulded, eight-way-rolling rubber bottomed software hero. Despite his work title he looks incredibly similar to Confrontal from the Bird Eye-pod advert.

True to his name

however he rolls, bounces and bounces around each of the sixteen playing areas. These Kingdoms all have a different theme, like Ice Kingdom or Flying Kingdom. Each one is deviously constructed to cause you as many problems as possible. The basic idea of each level is the same: to snap up every little diamond, power and fuel before the time runs out. At the start of each game you are given 99 on the timer with which you must complete all sixteen levels.

If you think that this sounds like a tall order then you'd be right. Every time you fall through the floor into space you lose a life, and prolonged contact with the insects that infest the levels also kills you off. Every life lost also deducts ten from the timer. Luckily for completion's sake you can get extra time back. There are alarm clocks in various places which give bonus seconds, and completing a level also tops up the timer.

Starting each game is done by selecting from a choice of four levels. This begins at 00, 06, 09 and 10, but as you advance the range of levels to choose from also advances. This option lets you travel back levels as well so if you're confident enough about a level you can do it all over again to get some time.

See that mean ball stop neatly over meadows and mountains? It's built through, it's curtains for our round drum. ▶

Stop, hop, stop, hop. The ball goes past its door, bounces, with walls around, to store ▶ him from the drop.

Your bouncy drum is extremely responsive to your control. To a limited degree he can be stepped in the air. Getting into the air in the first place is done either by jumping or riding over a wing. These catapult you into the air and you turn grey, plus you can fly around for a few seconds. This can be bad news because the chances are you'll fly into a sealed chamber and not be able to get out again.

Various items are impossible to reach without the point pos. These let you drop in extra floor to run over. You may even find that you need to use several of them in a row to complete a level. Other physical problems are pinball bumpers, ice, rebounding fences and disappearing squares.

Already selling well on the 16-bit market, this classic game is certainly destined for the PlayStation 3 game collection. www.sony.com

It deals with both types of football games, managing and playing, and quite successfully too. The graphics are very smart but it does tend to use the "A" key one (and, fail to use the "A" key one) so that the name of the club might not appear at all.

the 1990s, the number of people in the United States who are obese has increased by 50 percent. In 1990, 15 percent of the population was obese, and in 2000, 25 percent was obese. The increase in obesity is a major public health concern because it is a leading cause of heart disease, diabetes, and other chronic diseases. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) estimates that obesity costs the United States $147 billion each year in medical costs and lost productivity. The CDC also estimates that obesity is responsible for 300,000 deaths each year in the United States. The increase in obesity is a result of many factors, including changes in diet and lifestyle. In the 1990s, there was a significant increase in the consumption of high-calorie, high-fat foods, and a decrease in physical activity. The CDC has developed several programs to help reduce obesity, including the National Physical Activity Plan and the National Diet and Physical Activity Guidelines. The CDC also has a website, <http://www.cdc.gov/nccd/dnpa/>, that provides information on obesity and its prevention.

FOOTBALL MANAGER WORLD CUP EDITION 1990

The latest in Kevin Tomlin's array of management games and it's possibly going to redefine the football manager genre.

No matter what the game is like (as we've not seen it at time of going to press) it is going to satisfy all the FM fans that were unimpressed by the sequel

ENGLAND

Not an awful lot is known about this game at the moment, apart from the fact that it has been announced by Grandstream as the follow up to their Liverpool game.

The most that can be said about it at this stage is that it is based on the exploits of the England team.

The games that didn't quite make it into this issue for some reason or another are: Adidas World Championship Football (Ocean) which is the first time (to my knowledge) that a sportswear firm has been licensed; Audlogenic's (Dave Bassett, Lou Macori) Superleague Manager, which seems to be in direct competition with European Superleague but offers the owner a chance to link it with Emlyn Hughes. International Soccer; and Ocean have still got Liverpool on their books (too!)

It is not just the fact that the world is a better place than it was 10 years ago that makes me optimistic. It is the fact that the world is a better place than it was 10 years ago, and that the world is a better place than it was 10 years ago.

1. The first step is to identify the problem or question that needs to be addressed. This involves understanding the context and the specific requirements of the task.
2. Next, it is important to gather relevant information and data. This can be done through research, consultation with experts, or by analyzing existing data sets.
3. Once the information is gathered, the next step is to analyze it. This involves identifying patterns, trends, and potential solutions. It is important to consider all possible options and weigh their pros and cons.
4. After analysis, the next step is to develop a plan or strategy. This involves determining the most effective way to address the problem or question. The plan should be realistic and achievable.
5. The final step is to implement the plan. This involves putting the strategy into action and monitoring progress. It is important to be flexible and willing to make adjustments as needed.

Fiendish Freddy's Big Top O' Fun

Supplier: Mindscape

Price: £9.99 Cassette £14.99 Disk

Dear collection with a smile, a multistar and a whole lot of fun. The circus has one performance to earn enough coin to pay off the lease, but Freddy has his own designs and they are fiendish to say the least.

Roll up, roll up, up to five players can roll up. The events are still performed individually but the competitive edge is there. The first performance is Horace the High Diver. This perilous act has Horace diving from increasing heights into decreasing receptacles. On his downward journey he must spin (wobble the stick), and perform the requested moves (memorise these, reading the instructions during light can be dangerous). At the termination of the dive Horace must be in line with the receptacle or the performance ends. Freddy has the nasty habit of appearing with a fan to blow Horace off course.

Next, Jeffy-Joe the Juggler with his sea lion accomplice performs juggling feat upon a unicycle. Drop too many objects and you're off but watch out for Freddy as he terrify your accomplice with a sign and then introduces a little explosive power to top your performance. Roll to return Freddy's gift and you are out for the count.

Finale of the Flying Fuller Family is a short lived performance as the loops from trapeze to trapeze. Catch enough ropes and the will encounter the burning hoops but hang around as long and Freddy will toast your doornail.

Kinky Kiki has a trick and a half, as she reels upon the spinning wheel you throw your deadly blades or balloon ropes between her limbs. Freddy throws bombs between you and Kinky to distract you and, at the end of the act, she is unbalanced, which makes the performance fall flat.

The penultimate performance takes place on the high wire with Tony Tyros. Balance is essential but so is speed. On level one, Freddy wheels out the cannon but level two sees the solvent of the circular saw blades. When Tony falls he grabs the rope but Freddy appears to prise open his fingers.

The final act is Fernando the Human Cannonball. Examine the powder level in the cannon and then position the target, set the cannon angle and away you go. If you manage to avoid the posts and the ground you may just hit the target. On this final performance Freddy places a bomb in the end of the cannon with disastrous results.

After each performance you are judged by the downs. The more entertaining your act the more the downs abuse each other and the more money you raise. If you don't raise ten thousand the circus is doomed and Freddy has his wicked way. An entertaining game with some excellent humour but in places the graphics could be a little stronger. AP

DAILY DOUBLE

Supplier: CBS

Price: £9.99 (Cass) £14.99 (Disk)

You've heard it all before... Dead end. Twenty-five thousand horses. You can't lose. Shaved horses. Forty miles dead-end race. And I've got to blow this mortgage repayment.

Yes, Daily Double requires the player to do as the name suggests. Take out your life savings and risk it on a series of races of horses in the hope that one of them won't collapse before reaching the line. Ever wondered why horses are nicknamed jacks? That's because it's what the wife does when you get home after blowing all your cash...

The game is packaged brilliantly. Oh yes, so the box is nothing special. Nor is the disk and no you don't get a wind-up horse home (horses). You do however get a superb newspaper, the San Antonio Daily Double. It's a pocket-sized as a protection sheet to deter piracy. The form from over three hundred races is printed and the horses do run true to form - most of the time - just as in real life.

Unfortunately the horses are terrible so you can't try to recoup your losses on Dead End in the Chesham Gold Cup or Wentworth. Fortunately this does mean that it won't let you down again either. Despite Dead End's absence you can still lose loads of money though. The graphical representation of the game is obviously good as Dead End is the cup. But. However, this sort of any horse game tends to be secondary to the gameplay.

Despite the lack of graphics this horse run (I'll add the ones you haven't looked at) is the sound of horses of forty horses in the background and bells as you select bets and so on. Neither graphics nor sound are as important as the form of horses and this is a real pity for a game which is so good at what it does.

There's no denying the fact that this game is based upon pure greed. You're on the race for no reason other than to gamble and make money. There are nine types of bet to use, from the Daily Double to exotic bets like Quintella and Parlay. Quintella is a bet where you predict both the order and the place of five horses in a race. Parlay is a bet over two horses in different races. These are on top of the normal win, place and show.

Your current betting situation can be called up, or you can view yourself or other races. A certain amount of forward planning can thus be used to help you. You can take between $100 and $500 with you and after each race any wins you might have will be displayed plus the divided outcome of Parlay.

And this is a thing very special but quite computer. You're into horse racing. Not nearly as cute as many of the other games in the month so if you don't like gambling you're better off spending your money on a really nice horse. (I'm kidding.)

WHO FRAMED ENTERTAINMENT INTERNATIONAL

He's Back. Yet another astonishing YC world exclusive! The weird... The wacky... The wonderful... Simon Power has been dragged out of semi-retirement to write almost exclusively for the fun magazine. You read his stuff here, and you read his stuff FIRST.

"Travelling down to that boss in a jungle full of naked women... Boredom, on a mission to meet the jolly nice people at that good ol' sunny Entertainment International software house." He mumbled to himself with glee.

"Visions of a depressing looking pre-kid corrupted ruffly. 'I wouldn't run a business from their image' started to appear in my mind." He continued merrily.

"On arriving at launch (p'd 3), parking my new little run around, I drew, from its sheath, my blade and stroed to hack a path through the foliage to the Entertainment International front door.

"Shock, horror, gagge, wew, could I believe my eyes, it is really happening to me, etc. etc. all that crap. These people that gave us such visual delights as Space Ace and Dragon's Lair are, and this is as true as all the puns about the Pope relieving his bowels in the woods, anyway), by true, of the guys and girls that work there are cartoons. Rog, Robbie step aside, the Entertainment International team is here!" Becoming over zealous he falls from his seat in convulsions.

"All are cartoons or 'Toons' except one. And her name is Goldilocks... Sorry wrong story. Her name was Maria. Maria wants to be a short one-day, or a dog called Rex (More of that later) but is quite happy for now to deal with all the annoying interviews with the press."

"Maria is as skinny as a bowl of cherries on a cold winters night And was extremely keen to pass on lots of hot juicy information about the going on in their camp. So here goes. All you ever wanted to know about the people who put out games under the Empire and True labels." Please forgive him for the rather corporate last sentence.

"The company was founded in October 1983, by two happy go lucky toons - Simon Jeffery and Ian Higgins. Operations began in a small dark, dismal back room, but being fun toons who liked to boogie on down to the later hour beat they soon had the place rocking.

"In between all the partying and food fights with their toon buddies (it is rumored that one of these such drops is Sir Bugs himself.) They managed to start producing some amazing action games for all Commodore machines (C64, Amiga and PC)."

"The first game was under the Tintal label and was 'Crazy Cars'. 'Crazy Cars II' was supposed to follow, which gave them their names, faster, bigger, bigger seller to date. 'Crazy Cars I & II' did well on the budget label 'Hiquad' and gave the player a chance of smashing up a BMW, Porsche or a Ferrari, while trying to see some of America's biggest and bestest scenic landscapes. Speed is the name of the game - which was so addictive even the Government tried to ban it!" He becomes hysterical and raises his voice to an extreme level.

"But will the 'Crazy Cars' duo soon be flying from the Entertainment International number 1 spot? They seem to think so because they know what is going to be the early sensation of the nineties. Due for release in the beginning of March is the game that will hit the nation harder than a gale force wind. It is so exciting that even the band of merry toons who work there can't stop playing. After the game was first seen by them, a party bigger than no other resulted - which was the biggest, the best, the longest and the loudest one ever... The label is thus - the game is Pipermania." A squeal of excitement emerges from him as his role is told.

"Okay, so maybe that is a slight exaggeration. Maybe the party didn't last as long as I implied. But, what the hell. The game is good - I should know - I've played it, so there. There's no need to be jealous though. Old Uncle Simon will tell you all about it." He begins to calm down.

"The graphics are neat and are what some may call - simple. The background music could become a little annoying with time, but we all have volume controls on our minors or TVs. The gameplay though is spot on. The idea is to connect together large amounts of drainpipe - 14 pieces in all have to be lined together in order to clear the screen.

"Sounds simple? Well it isn't. The pieces you are supplied with don't automatically attach to the already laid pipe. And the yucky gunk which runs through will soon spout out of the end and ruin your chances of ever unrolling reasonably decent again. Pipermania was shown to the big bad gunslinging guys who own America's huge

Pipe Mania!!!

Lucasfilm software label, they were so shot down by its addictiveness that they offered to help in the programming of it. Making it an even more overpowering bit of entertainment," he breathes heavily.

"With Gazzo (who in their right mind calls somebody Gazzo) still doing well promoting Gazzo's super soccer (Gazzo is not a Loon), which is Entertainment International's stab at the Pooey game field under the Empire label. And 'Space Ace' taking the fifth place in the Christmas chart - while only on one format. Amiga, who knows what these amazing tools will do next," he says in a fatherly tone of voice.

"With a good selection of adventure, role-playing, car racing, footballing, piping and cartoning games under their belt - anything could happen. (But what ever it is, however it looks, it's bound to sell.

The loons have got it right this time. It seems that they can find time in-between all the mega film making with old Bob, H., and Reg. B., the partying with marvellous Mario, and gameplaying of Pipemania to keep all of us - the punters - happy." He finishes with a sigh of relief, removing himself from the large tree and clumping back into his snug looking bed.

Here comes... Ten... Amazing fact about... the marvellous... the mechanical... Mario Pauwels.

NUMBER ONE - Mario eventually wants to be a man - preferably hunky - preferably named... Clint Eastwood.

NUMBER TWO - Mario, being slightly corporate, cuts her role nails in the bathroom.

NUMBER THREE - If Mario could be a fish, she would be... A Shark. Why? Who Knows?

NUMBER FOUR - Marvellous Mario doesn't own a computer. (Tur, Tur)

NUMBER FIVE - Being sweet natured Mario is she trying to lead? Mario would like to smell like a rose.

NUMBER SIX - Mario was born in Belgium.

NUMBER SEVEN - Mario prefers Mellow.

NUMBER EIGHT - Mario is good drums with a dog named Rex, who lives in Belgium.

NUMBER NINE - Mario's favourite TV AD is the Guinness series. Which stars some bloke who once appeared in a nondescript movie about a teacher.

NUMBER TEN - Mario is extremely cute - and very cuddly.

Grand Prix Circuits

This is a several gear race, and is a simulation rather than an arcade game. Don't let that put you off though, 'cause once you are racing the adrenaline will be pumping like crazy. There are five levels of difficulty, and if those aren't enough is offered, exceed to Nigel. If not, one that I can take you to the next level or a full and complete set of rules. Never say die, only for your personal satisfaction.

in Amiga format last year, and that version was absolutely brilliant. The Commodore 64 version, dating from 1985, is also fab. The actual racing is the perfect balance between arcade style hacking along the track, and the more racing simulation style driving on the corners and when trying to overtake. It's difficult but there's nothing as much fun as overtaking the race leader and shouting 'bar rubber head Mr. Johnny Holopants Racing driver', at the monitor as you do so.

It takes a bit of getting into, particularly the user sensitive steering, but once you've been playing it for an hour or so, you'll find it difficult to put down. This is my favourite racing game of all time, and the Commodore 64 version is every bit as good as the other versions that are around. Lots of thought have obviously gone into producing as realistic as possible a version of Formula One racing as you're gonna get. It's fab.

Ferrari Formula One

I've included this one because it's one of the latest to come under the arcade order. In addition, my view of it seems to differ from everyone else's, and there's nothing like a bit of arguing to keep reviewers happy for hours when they meet up at the various shows. Like Grand Prix Circuits, this one's a simulation rather than an arcade racer. It goes even further than GPC however.

and attempts to take in the whole of a typical season. Thus the player has to rest and modify the car between rounds, participate in the four hour practice session and literally plan the whole of the season. There's a pretty good load of options, race history lists, but they include chiding for wind resistance, altering the engine components, directing the tyres—just about everything.

Unfortunately, in the attempt to squeeze in much realism in as possible, it loses its character a lot of the playability that kept it hot. The usual scenery for the driving is horrible, the screen shifts up/down about twice a second, and there's no real impression of speed, and apart from the loading tune, the sound is horrendous. Even with the disk version there's a lot of clicking and disk flipping, and I don't care to imagine what it would be like on cassette. A creditable attempt to provide an insight into what real Grand Prix racing is like, and a highly regarded simulation by some. Not enough playability for my money though.

Chase HQ

Another arcade conversion, this time courtesy of the programming pixies up at Ocean. This one has almost got a scenario! You are a traffic cop armed with an armour plated Porsche, with the aim of designing the roads of naughty criminals. They seem to drive similar cars to you, so catching them can be a little troublesome, but you are armed with a four wheel turbo which can be blamin' useful in your pursuit of perps. You chase them up hill and down dale, round the corners and along the road, but when you catch up with them, you 'crash' them into a different car, and for you the 'crash' may be a good thing, mind pulling over. And how many rounds of the level do you win? 200. No way! You can't smooth and crash them off the road, trying not to take too many crashes. Out, out while you dash.

As a conversion of the arcade machine, this one isn't too bad at all. The graphics are good, and the car can really bugle. The scrolling isn't too bad, however, and there isn't a huge impression of speed, except the turbo burnin'. It does seem a little slow, and I suspect that having a camera for it, there'll be quite a few that'll finish it within a couple of days.

Stunt Car Racer

This one is an arcade game. Well, it's a sort of simulation. Erm... it's a bit of both really. You are in a league with two other drivers, and must race both drivers in turn on two tracks. Should you win your league, you progress to the next with two other drivers and rougher tracks. The odds are the sort of thing you'd find on the average racetrack, with huge chunks of track being very high up, down, very high up, very low down, and then very, very high to very very low in about two yards, making it a totally sick making trip. There are four leagues, making a total of eight different tracks and erm... fifty seven... no, hang about... twelve drivers. This one's to be different from all of the others, in that the graphics are vector, surely the future of the fastest racing games.

The 'car' is rendered pretty well, and the track moves pretty fast as well. This game is really compulsive, and for anyone who wants arcade style speed and fun, mixed up with some seriously difficult racing situations, it simply can't be beaten. How about an arena racer like MicroProse, or Stunt Car Racer too? Aw, go on... please... it's the process.

Still in Testing

Not content with that lot? Well, luckily for you the future holds some pretty hot poop releases on the of Century 44 racing team. Amongst the forthcoming 'amateurs' are, for example, Devin' Force, by Digital Magic. Devin' Force allows you to race all sorts of vehicles, from formula One cars to Werblets, round loads of Power Belt style tracks. This one is a megahit on the screen for machines, and Digital Magic have been inundated with requests from dealers for a Commodore 64 version. At the time of going to press it was still in the very early stages, but it should be a corker if it's anything like the other versions.

Hard Devin', the arcade licence converted by Comark, should be hitting the shops at about the same time as this issue of TC. Most of you will be familiar with the arcade version, in which you rack around various tracks and smash into cows, amongst other things. It'll probably be a pretty hot conversion, but one criticism of other versions has been that it's a fairly easy to complete and doesn't hold much appeal once it is finished.

What's to say what's going to happen beyond that? No doubt someone like Ocean will be announcing the rights to Chase HQ at some point. And another thing, Super Monaco Grand Prix has been around in the arcades for last six months now, and no one has announced the licence. Whosewater's idea? Too scared of such an awesome conversion task? At least let us know what's got the home conversion rights.

DOWN IN THE DUNGEONS

The YC lads muck down to Chislehurst, wave rubber swords and plod back to the skip! Photography by

(Paul Brown)

The Labyrinth is a live roleplaying game based in a real cave system in Kent. Live roleplaying is like playing a fantasy game for real. You take the part of a warrior, wizard, thief, priest or whatever and play them as if you were that person. This extends to the casting of spells and all of the trouble your character gets involved with.

No matter what the chance of success or failure depends on a dice roll. If something goes wrong it's because you made it that way. The intrepid YC team of Adrian Bone, Pumfrey, Mike Tate, Henderson and the infamous Eugene "Chomoso" Comer-Caine descended upon Chislehurst with reinforcements to give it a bash.

There is little actual danger involved in live roleplaying. The weapons are generally a combination of corkwood and silver rope and are on the more posh side. Reckless blows are not permitted, nor is misuse of the shield. The worst you can do is run into a wall or trip over. The caves are very chalky though so you'll need to take old clothing. Costume can be as elaborate or as simple as you wish. It's your character after all.

First timers will be given a training session and a lesson in safety. The age limit of sixteen will be strictly adhered to but younger players can arrange special dungeons. Don't go expecting to be half-hearted about it - you're in and involved 100%. But the emphasis is definitely on enjoying the enjoyment.

The adventure, as told by Cornelius the Grey Wizard

As I entered the town of Emryn, I felt weary and in need of refreshment. I noticed that many workshops were heading towards a dingy tavern called the Skull and Bones. Naturally I avoided such watering holes; but this one seemed to have a certain character about it. Anyway, I needed work; coin is essential to any adventure.

I entered uneasily. It was unlikely that anyone in there was a mage, for my power but anyone could get in a lucky shot. I found a table, empty but for a burly warrior dead in his. These seemed thin and thin, with many places, unlikely to offer any real protection. And why not? He should have easily snapped me in half given the chance. He eyed me suspiciously, and I smiled disarmingly in return, and I put him at his ease. I asked him his name.

"Don't know", he replied roughly.

"What?"

"Don't know? I'm a warrior."

"Oh? I'm Cornelius the grey

Magician climb the wall that he was destined not

"Wizard."

He gave a little whimper and got up to sit on another table.

Noting this with interest, I looked around at the other occupants of the tavern. There were another couple of warrior types, including an Eastern fighter called Kinrod, one or two priests, a smelly Half Orc called Gansad and a Hobbit. This little guy must have about 3' tall and introduced himself as Slyneth Daggerpickers.

The atmosphere was quite easy while we got drinking. However this air was broken by the entrance of a stranger, wizardly character. He walked in and I could almost see his aura of power. He said that his name was Sards and that he needed a party of adventurers. An earthquake near the town of Morge had uncovered an ancient scroll. This needed bringing back and we were offered the sum of 150 Gains per person. This price was too low for me so I negotiated a fee of a new spell rune.

The others were quite happy with his offer so off we went. He gave me a map which showed the location of Morge and the Queens Cavern where the scroll was known to be. It took us several days to reach Morge. Having been followed almost all the way by extremists called the Ardo, we were suspicious of the journey, and we found it. A man ran up to us and threatened to sell us out to the Ardo, unless we paid him large sums of money. We soon chased him off though.

Approaching Morge, the Half Orc began jumping up and down and making pleasant snuffling noises. When we asked what he was up to he said "Can't ya smell it?" Then the wind changed direction and the stench of rotting corpses hit us. As if to punctuate this smell, three rotting Humanoids approached us. Quickly the priest roared off some harsh guttural sounds, poured as if burning, and told us they were undead. At this point DR suddenly went mad! The blows seemed to glimmer bounce off him as he madly slashed at the living dead.

Once they left (quite quickly actually) he turned and charged into the sea of the pony! We all hit the deck, except for the hapless Bots. He stood his ground. Bonecrunching blows smashed into his shield and the force threw him down. Clearly DR was possessed by an overwhelming urge to crash, bash, pound and smash everything in sight, so we tried to calm him down. Eventually his behaviour again, flying sword and mace wildly. None dared to reach the bodies for fear of the plague.

After a while we met a madman. He ambled around playing silly games on us, pulling imaginary doves out of people's ears and pretending to do odd tricks. But he made the mistake of calling DR stupid as the inevitable happened! While his bewitching eyes were occurring I crawled away to a safe place I nearly bumped into Slyneth as he was returning to tell us about the tunnel. Looking at the map I ascertained that it was the right tunnel.

The others eventually caught us up. On inspection the tunnel proved to be very low and dangerous-looking. It also smelt of rot and death. While the priests were administering maps I got into debate. Arguing in broken old Elvish who was going in first. Eventually the Hobbit was chosen as our only scout. Ahead of it was his job. He dived down the hole and began to crawl away. Silence... then three loud explosions and the Hobbit screamed! We heard shuffling noises and he emerged. His leg had been blown half off by some magic and his sword was shattered by it.

The priests couldn't afford to care his leg as he could still use it. But he wouldn't go back down no matter what we tried. So Kinrod went down instead. He came back very pale and said that he thought there were undead in the tunnel. More arguments. I tried to scare DR into going by throwing a huge chunk of wood in front of him. It scared him but only into a corner. So I went. On the way I mended

DR powers in a corner with even full of fear, little does he know... with the fear of the darkness, that this staff which his holds is immortally magical slowly and his eyes lost their magic look.

We then heard a plea for help. Three people emerged from Morge, and asked me to heal them from the plague. I released them to Mogodon the priest and sneered that I'm not sure how the light broke out but DR was in there the Hobbit's sword. I came back once I heard a his and saw a roiled face. Ghoul Jothus confirmed my description of it but the priests were not wiser to afford it with their power.

Gansad finally opted to go on his own. DR said "We, said it" and dived down after him shouting "Out of the way" - a physical impossible! We all began to follow. A few paralyzations later we dispatched the ghoul and tar huddled in the tunnel while DR argued with a shimmering snake. The argument ended with the snake spraying him with a cursed poison while he smugged the girl. He felt very ill afterwards as the poison worked through his veins. Faced with the prospect of his death, I forced him to drink five healing potions while the priests cured his legional damage.

DR was up on his feet again. Gonad and I began searching a crypt, only to find a mummy inside a coffin! This undead really shook us up. He hit me in the chest and the arm, and my self-healer (which only partially stopped the blows) I dodged outside. Meanwhile, the shimmering appeared on the painting of two beings on the wall of the crypt. A figure emerged from the eastern wall of the crypt, a diuidic figure holding someone aloft. He said that his name was Herwick, rolled up to get out then shouted a word (Herick?) and a bolt of energy hit DR in the chest.

Being of the magic persuasion, this frightened him away back down the tunnel. However, I looked forward to this confrontation - someone to match my powers against. Muttering words of magic I wove a spell of magic camouflage about myself. Then I gasped in shock as he produced a Grease - a sixth level spell! This was too much for me to face alone; I cast another spell which camouflaged me with the wall (raising my hand to indicate that I was invisible).

Gonad took on the Grease in pure darkness with me in support. We soon dealt with it, and the Mummy, the diuid was on his own now. Faced with Gonad, Rincaro and me he soon succumbed to the odds. Not before he clobbered my arm though. As he fell I used my good arm to grab the staff away from him.

Then it was hurt the priest time. They had all buggered off down the tunnel, except for the Hobbit, who was unconscious on the floor. The priests were out of spirit soon, and I still needed healing, so we all meditated for three minutes.

Having got some power back, they were able to heal my arm. While they ran around healing the others I cast a spell and began rolling to the left. It was quite willing to talk and I found that it held a lot of power, but the quartz for today was used up. I decided to hang onto it. Those of the others who were able to walk climbed over a high wall and made their way across a very deep pit. After another meditation it was my turn to follow.

The wind threatened to blow me right down the pit to my doom. I found the others going to a two-headed monster. This meant us being kept barricading itself. After a brief argument concerning the whereabouts of the Herick a fight broke out. The monster was causing damage with one hand (and using it with the other!) DK made short work of it. I found a nice piece of treasure, testing it for magic. I found that it was tenth level plus! It had to be the trigger to a firewall. And we found it blocking the entrance to another tunnel.

I gingerly touched the treasure against the wall. Success! DK (who had of the first mission of magic) was looked for while Kintaro died down the tunnel. Meanwhile the priest had cured Snytooth's legs and he was making his way back across the pit. A few others went down after Kintaro then I followed. Yells from Kintaro told us that he was stuck in a giant spiderweb. The woman began hacking away at the spider which ran away, then DK got to them.

We besieged the spider in its lair. It soon died, despite some of the women getting stuck in the web. I cast a location spell to find the scroll but it didn't work because of the arcane power around me. But Mogodon and I were into the pit and looked for it. The scroll was found! Our Mogodon got it stuck to the web. I got the scroll stuck too. Things looked bleak, but I got DK to banish away while holding the other end. I paid him with two items of treasure I had found.

We got back to Emlyon and found Sordis. He was very pleased with our success and granted our awards willingly.

A message from Sordis was trying to get in touch with Melph. Roger said "heyward. He says to seek out the Watcher on the edge of Forever as he has new information for Heusdrick.

In conclusion

We all thoroughly enjoyed ourselves, and anyone who has never tried live roleplaying should give it a go. It's relatively cheap at £6-7 for a three hour adventure and is great value for money. You can live out your dreams or your nightmares and have a jolly good laugh working things with large rubber warts.

SCUM OF THE EARTH

It's new, it's mean, it's squeaky clean (well, not really)! Get ready for even bigger tips themselves to read hints and tips.

Compiling all of this and is a daunting task, even for the deprivation in evidence on the YC team. So we're going to need your help. Being mega-beings has its advantages you know, and as some of the most influential of all the mega-beings, we're prepared to offer you a bribe or two. From now on, those of you lucky enough to become SCUM OF THE EARTH will receive all sorts of strange artifacts as a reward:-

BRIGHTLY COLOURED BADGES showing just how rocky a slimer you are LARGE DECORATIVE T-SHIRTS to eat your diet of empty larger cans in THE BEST SOFTWARE for you to get your teeth into DAY TRIP LIVE ROLEPLAYING when we can be bothered to organise it and anything else we can imagine that just low down burns as you check out there would enjoy. So what you may ask, do you, a mere mortal, have to do to join the SCUM OF THE EARTH? It's easy. Just send in as many hints, tips, jokes, cheat codes, both down or solutions as you can. Everything we print will be rewarded in some way or another, depending on how long it is, how well it's presented, and how slimy the crud that you send us really is. Don't expect the fame to be easy on you, though - all of those people turning up to you in the street (and asking for your autograph)

Get those snippets of time down on paper, parchment or freshly retrieved human skin, and post them to this address:

And don't forget to put your name and address (unless you're too embarrassed) on every piece you send in. Get on it, slime!

The crowd for the first ever SCUM OF THE EARTH goes to Jamie Sykes of Conham, Wiltshire. Well done, you little slimer! Jamie says that he'd love a copy of BLOODWYCH. Too bad! You'll be getting a copy of CRIMINAL, as well as a few other bits and pieces. This is what our James had to offer:-

Greetings, slimers, and welcome to the darkest bowels of YC magazine. It's Dozzy Eugene here, King of Slime-City. For all of you greasy whelps who can't air themselves up to get anywhere in your computer games, we're starting up SCUM OF THE EARTH. These pages are for the total wimps who just are no good at games and have no lower

For these poles, you're going to need either a rear switch or a cartridge with a pole option. Rest easy after loading, bung in the poles and off you go!

FLAME ON

Stuart Green looks at the comic renaissance, while Rik Henderson reviews the latest in mainstream

CALIFORNIAN'S WITH ATTITUDE

It's hard to believe now, as we slowly recover from the media quagmire that was the Batman movie, and with several more multi-million dollar comic-based movies in production than ten years ago the comic industry was on its knees. In America a hardcore half million readers were supporting an industry that in the fifties and sixties had been quite used to selling a million plus of top-selling titles. And in Britain the anthology comic, that had been the publishers' mainstay since time immemorial, was slowly going to the wall to leave 2000 AD practically on its tod in your local newsagents.

Despite what you may read elsewhere, it was not fancy re-readings of the superhero myths that kickstarted the new fashionable comic renaissance. But the pioneering philosophies of independent publishers both here and in the States.

LOVE AND ROCKETS

First among the independents is Panopoeia Books of California. In 1982 they started to publish their first regular comic Love and Rockets (quarterly, £ve £1.95), written and drawn by Mexican American brothers, Gilbert and Jaime Hernandez, who had spent much of the seventies on the docks, hanging out at LA pub-gigs. Always big comic fans – their mother had collected them and passed on her enthusiasm to her sons, they'd read everything, from a staple diet of Marvel, DC's, Archie comics, to the more left field experiments of the series underground ones. In 1981 this all seemed to come together in the first issue of Love and Rockets, the local punks and punkeers, the music, the Mexican heritage, the comic dreamscape, drawn in an elegant clear line.

Jaime introduced two female characters, Maggie and Hopey. In the title strip, as part of a future world replete with the usual comic sci-fi paraphernalia of Hover Cars, Spacehips and dinosaurs. Even then it was so much imaginatively conceived junk, unnecessarily packing in the most charming, sexy, smart-mouthed odd of characters since Don Lee first said 'make mine money'. Within two issues much of it had been jettisoned in favour of a series of stories that revolve around Maggie and Hopey and the people they know in Hoppers 13, Los Angeles. It's like all the Rebel movies Francis Ford Coppola always dreams of making, that John Hughes couldn't even conceive of.

Gilbert focussed his attention on creating the mythical Mexican village of Palomar with a series of stories that go under the collective title of Heartbreak Soup. His odd, tall rangers fromazan who see himself on fire in protest against the world's stinking, no Lubo, owner of the local cinema and mimes of the both houses. It's a rich and complex (but not difficult) collection of tales that weave together with all the myth and magic of Mexican folk tales and comic fantasy.

NEAT STUFF

Then there is Joanie 'Tork Girl' Hewlett, and Philip 'Mind World' Bond's favourite comic Neat Stuff (quarterly, b/w), by Peter Bagge: a humour comic that contains some of the funniest and most accurate comedy of the previous decade. Bagge concentrates his vision on the loonies who populate the Great American suburbs. For instance, The Bradleys: Mom, Pop, Buddy, Dots and Quetz the all-American family: spiteful, small-minded, petty (and hysterical). A picture of a group of people held together by nothing more than blood, they don't like each other at all. When they erupt, Bagge's cartooning does hallucinatory cartwheels, his characters darting into hilarious vignettes of shock's teeth, and evil popping eyes.

SINNER

Sinner (quarterly, b/w £1.95) by Jose Munoz and Carlos Sampayo mines the more homely territory of the private eye. Originally taking its cues from the hard boiled pulp of Raymond Chandler and Dashiell Hammett, Sinner has developed into an investigation of the Big City, any city, any place but New York. The detectives, the drunks, the panhandlers, the lost and the lonely, all get a look in as Sinner tries to come to terms with his own demons as well as those of the city he loves to hate.

DA REVIEW BIT

NIGHT BREED #1 Epic Comics

This is an adaptation of the forthcoming horror shocker from Clive Barker, and if rumour is true, it seems as if the comic may do better than the movie itself. This is a shame though, because the film looks as if it could be truly stunning, whereas John Woodner, Alan Grant, and Jim Barker's version falls very short of the mark we have come to expect from comics with Mr. Barker's name attached.

It's not as if it's bad, just when compared to some truly horrific tales, like Hellblazer and Sandman, Night Breed owes far too much to the gore aspect than the ability to shock the mind. Also Jim Barker's artwork does not lend itself to this side of the comic industry.

Not so much as let down, more a third buy after Hellblazer and Sandman.

Avataraka Press

Being edited by two of the industry's most respected comic artists, Gary Leitch and Dave Ellice, there is can be no doubt that the quality inside this compilation of short strips will be very high indeed.

There are strips inside from such upstanding members of the trade as John Bolton, Eddie Campbell, and Glenn Fabry, but the whole issue, for me, is made by a truly excellent Geoffery by Alan Moore and Steve Parkhouse. It is everything that mature comic strip humour should be. The Geoffery Ballard Acres and the Geoffery 1980 by far one of his best personal work since his old days on Judge Dredd.

Maybe a bit expensive at £2.50, but by far the best way of orientating yourself towards today's glowing new wave of comic stories.

RIPPER #1 Avalon

Dave Gibb is best known for his 'nasty' and often lecherous and sadistic, and perhaps, on the wrong corner, his storylines in the comic Properly a Gentleman, and certainly the demand for a new series.

See if you can imagine the idea behind this. A guy has someone very close to him murdered by street punks (in a rather brutal fashion), so he donnes a dash leather/PVC outfit, together with cowl, and vows revenge on the scum who have done this deed. Now if that reminds you of a slightly more well-known glib knight, then you may be pleased to know that the similarity ends there. I said 'may be' because instead of leaving criminals tied up, leather-policie, this hero hogs, traps, slashes and maims his way through a plethora of sadly stereotypical black youths, until you know down the comic seething.

say, the latest Spiderman epic. The artwork is in a striking form of mono, and pencilled by DiMarco, best known for his work on Timely in Deadline. And this latest issue starts a new story where the bespectacled being gets to meet his mate.

I've never really had the desire to come across Wrestle II before, but now that I have, I feel that my head has been doused in the waters of enlightenment. I have converted (and will Superman's) underwear ever look the same to me again? RH

MISTER X #7 Vortex Comics

Mister X is an acquired taste, but what if told you that that it is a very different shade indeed. It is one of the more abstract comics I've read. Mister X (which should not be seen as suggesting violence, it's a horror comic) does not follow the set.

feeling that this is as original as the fun should, it seems to me that Epic (a subsidiary of publishing giant Marvel) is trying to cash in on the violence/Punisher boom (Boom with a capital Oom). There is a high oh blood from cover to cover, and although the artwork looks like a cross between Klaus and Bill Sienkiewicz, there seems to be no intention to make this of Epic Comics usually high quality.
